Hello David,

As I mentioned we rarely go through this procedure, so there is no exact "this will take x months or years to complete." Since the Agency has concluded the 20 products subject to the proposed cancellation cause unreasonable adverse effects, we plan to move the cancellation process along as expeditiously as possible and believe we can complete the process within a year. I have heard others outside the Agency speculate that it could take much longer (up to four years). Following the administrative procedures outlined in FIFRA, this cancellation case can be heard in the courts if those challenging the cancellation feel this is in their interest.

Please let me know if you have any further questions.

Regards,

Hi Rusty,

I just thought of a question related to the call we were just on. When cancellation of these registrations be complete? How long does the process take after the SAP meeting?

Thanks,
David
